Event Information

'Bidoun' returns this month with another left-field poke at the effects of the West on Arab youth (and vice versa). Comprising an invite-only art and film exhibition and (later in the evening) a dance night, Bidoun is the only attempt at genuinely 'radical' art in the country.

Pop Art from former Central St Martins College student Rana Salam and specially commissioned furniture/sculpture from Khalid Al-Najjar are the highlights of the exhibition until 10pm, followed by the short film 'I Call Myself Persian' by Iranian-American directors Tanaz Eshaghian and Sara Nodjoumi. (See Art & Culture for preview).

Britain's DJ Magazine called the main attraction on the Kasbah's dance floor 'the Talvin Singh of North African music.' DJ U-cef brings Arabic music and breakbeat together in a storm of sound. He will be accompanied by film and digital visuals from 26mm and Wael Hattar.

Don't miss these events. You'll kick yourself if you do.
